Medicine is all about keeping track of and maintaining the human body system, and technology is moving that job away from the doctor and towards the individual through wearable technology. In this challenge, we build a system that monitors heart rate, study the interconnections between various body systems, and design systems that tell us when something changes - both bad and good.

Curriculum License: $119

Student Manual: $14.95