THE SECOND CENTURY CAMPAIGN

SMU's Bobby B. Lyle School of Engineering educates engineers and innovators to be leaders and creative problem solvers, prepared to take on the most profound challenges of our time. In addition to receiving the very best technical education, our students are extraordinarily well equipped with the skills needed to shape organizations and lead efforts that create value, opportunity and societal benefit for those here and around the globe. At the Lyle School, no problem is too big.

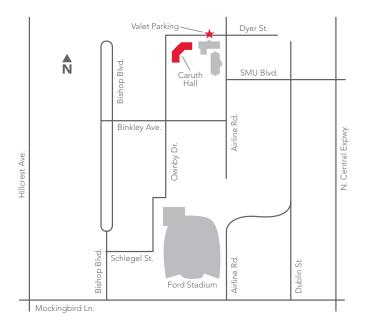

Caruth Hall is the third engineering building completed by the University in the past eight years. During this time, the Lyle School has launched an aggressive strategic plan, recruited nationally prominent faculty and created a number of centers and institutes designed to address the most pressing issues at home and abroad.
