THE RECESSIONAL
Trumpet Voluntary in D, Opera Sesta

During the 1830s, the parents of Robert McFarlin, for whom this auditorium was named, lived in Ovilla, Texas. There was no Methodist Church in the area—instead the Methodists were served by a circuit rider. The McFarlins gave the circuit rider the land and money to build the Ovilla Methodist Church, pictured on the curtain, which Robert McFarlin attended.

You are cordially invited to attend the Inauguration of President R. Gerald Turner at 10 a.m., Saturday, September 9, in Moody Coliseum. Members of the University family, leaders of the Dallas community, and representatives of colleges and universities nationwide will gather for this historic event in the life of SMU.
THE ACADEMIC PROCEDING

The academic procession and the regalia worn by the faculty and officers of the University symbolically represent the continuing link between the modern American university and the founding of the great medieval universities in Europe—chief among them Bologna, Paris, and Oxford. As those institutions were derived from the Catholic Church, the universities adopted many of the ceremonial trappings of the Church in their official public function.

The mace of the University, a symbol of the authority vested in the president by the Board of Trustees and representing the covenant between the president and the faculty, is borne by the president of the Faculty Senate, elected by all faculties (this year, Associate Professor Mary Vernon of the Division of Art). Though the order of procession varies from university to university, at SMU it proceeds from the chief marshal and mace-bearer through the ranks of the faculty, and the officers of the University, to the president. At Commencement, the candidates for graduation precede the faculty.

The caps and gowns worn in the procession also vary from place to place. There are variations in design to indicate the degrees held by the wearers, and many universities in America have introduced colorful gowns and other distinguishing details (in place of the customary clerical black from which they originated). The bachelor’s gown is a simple robe falling in straight lines from an elaborate yoke. It is distinguished by its long, pointed sleeves. Master’s gowns are arranged so that the arm emerges from a long sleeve through a slit at the wrist (replacing a former slit at the elbow). In most cases, the doctor’s gown is marked by velvet panels down the front and around the neck, and by three bars of the same material on the bell-shaped sleeves. It is cut much fuller than the other gowns, and may be ornamented in color. Faculty colors are occasionally seen in the sleeve bars and paneling.

The caps, too, vary according to the customs of the university from which the wearer received a degree. While most American universities adopted the “mortarboard” style of Oxford, others have chosen styles based on other European institutions. The color of the tassel worn with the cap may be black for any degree; or, the color may be that of the faculty of the major field of learning (e.g., Arts, Engineering, Law, etc.) Persons holding doctoral degrees and governing officials of institutions are entitled to wear tassels of gold metallic thread. Such tassels are usually sewn in place. It is common practice, although not universal, that a ceremony is made of moving the tassel from the right to the left of the cap at the moment the degree is awarded.

Within the great varieties of styles and colors in gowns and caps, there has been one universally accepted code for the hood worn trailing down the wearer’s back. Originally, it was like the hood on the habit worn by monks—and very useful, for protection against the weather and even for begging for alms. Nowadays, the hood through length and color shows the degree and the specialization of the wearer, and the university that granted the degree. The bachelor’s, master’s, and doctor’s hoods are three feet, three and one-half feet, and four feet long, respectively. The velvet trimmings in the same order is two, three, and five inches wide. The color of the trim identifies the faculty. A partial list of faculty colors follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Arts, Letters, Humanities</th>
<th>White</th>
<th>Music</th>
<th>Pink</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Business</td>
<td>Drab</td>
<td>Philosophy</td>
<td>Dark Blue</td>

<tr>
<td>Engineering</td>
<td>Orange</td>
<td>Science</td>
<td>Golden Yellow</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fine Arts</td>
<td>Brown</td>
<td>Theology</td>
<td>Scarlet</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Law</td>
<td>Purple</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The lining of the hood—that portion most visible from the rear—indicates the institution awarding the degree. SMU’s hood lining, for example, is blue with a red chevron.

Through these colorful ceremonies, SMU symbolically displays the origins of organized learning in the Western world.
