Re: Final Report on SMU Unbridled: The Second Century Campaign

Date: February 25, 2016

On behalf of SMU’s Development and External Affairs team, it is my honor to present an executive summary of our final report on the results of SMU Unbridled: The Second Century Campaign.

By nearly every measure SMU has succeeded in conducting a comprehensive and inclusive major gifts campaign resulting in significant financial support, increased visibility for the University and broader engagement among key University stakeholders. The entire SMU family joined together at a unique time in SMU history, leveraging the centennial commemorations of SMU’s founding and opening as well as the establishment of the George W. Bush Presidential Center, to conduct a campaign of unprecedented success, the impact of which will benefit SMU and its students and faculty far into the future.

Special thanks are due the administrative and volunteer leadership of the University, especially SMU President Turner, the Campaign’s six co-chairs and members of the Campaign Leadership Council. Through their vision, commitment and generosity inspiring unprecedented support for the University, SMU has entered the ranks of the nation’s most prestigious institutions of higher education in terms of development success and has established a transformative base of support that secures its strength going forward.

It has been a distinct honor for the Development and External Affairs staff to have supported the Board, academic and administrative leadership, volunteer leadership and our generous donors as they banded together to accomplish this significant achievement. We look forward to offering continued service in support of our joint efforts to secure a second century of achievement for SMU.
A. Executive Summary

Context and Planning

The Campaign for SMU: A Time to Lead concluded in April 2002, having secured a record-breaking $542 million from over 41,000 donors worldwide. Under the leadership of SMU president R. Gerald Turner and Campaign Co-chairs Ruth Altshuler, Robert Dedman, Sr., W. R. Howell, Ray Hunt and Caren Prothro, SMU successfully launched and conducted a campaign which far exceeded its original goal of $300 million. Immediately following the Campaign’s conclusion, the SMU Board of Trustees established an Ad-Hoc Committee on Development, charged with ensuring that the new donor base engaged by the Campaign did not dissipate, and emerging needs from SMU’s newest Strategic Plan were defined and promoted to potential lead and major gift donors.

In 2004 the SMU Board of Trustees, upon recommendation of the Ad-Hoc Committee, established 2005-2006 as a Planning Year for a new comprehensive major gifts campaign. This directive was followed by others related to campaign volunteer and staff structures, campaign financing, funding priorities, giving levels, marketing and promotion strategies, accounting guidelines, and others items related to the establishment of a new campaign organization. The Board also appointed co-chairs of the Campaign: Ruth Altshuler, convening co-chair Gerald Ford, Ray Hunt, Caren Prothro and Carl Sewell (Michael Boone was subsequently added upon his election as chairman of the SMU Board of Trustees).

Timeline

The Board authorized the initiation of a campaign Quiet Phase in 2006, and the launch of a campaign Public Phase in 2008, with three public goals: total commitments of $750 million; total alumni participation in the Campaign of 50%; and yearly undergraduate alumni participation of 25%. At the time of the Campaign’s public launch, over $317 million had been committed. The Campaign was scheduled to conclude in December 2013.

During the Quiet Phase, over 500 volunteers across the nation were recruited to serve on 21 school, unit and city/regional Campaign Steering Committees, all led by a 15-person Campaign Executive Council (subsequently expanded to 19). Later in the Campaign, Steering Committees were added for Alumni and Faculty & Staff. These volunteers were enthusiastically joined by hundreds of alumni around the globe supporting the Campaign through reunions, regional chapter activities and other alumni programs, as well as representatives of the Parent’s Leadership Council, the Planned Giving Council and the Mustang Club, among other support groups. Importantly, DEA staff structures were aligned to support these volunteer efforts, perhaps most notably for the first time in support of regional and national efforts. A volunteer meeting schedule was established, including quarterly gatherings of the Co-Chairs and Campaign Leadership Council; bi-annual meetings of the Campaign Executive Council (chairs of Campaign Steering Committees); and periodic meetings of Campaign Steering Committees.
As part of the pre-campaign planning process, the Director of Leadership Gifts position was created within the Office of the Vice President to coordinate solicitations of $1 million or more, supported by a Leadership Gifts workgroup consisting of the Vice President for Development and DEA leadership from Development and Prospect Research/Management. A goal was established of securing 150 leadership-level gifts by the Campaign’s conclusion. Through the Campaign timeframe, hundreds of names were researched, cultivated and solicited; efforts included coordination with University administrators, the development of a quarterly presidential communication, and special engagement efforts personalized for each prospect. As part of this initiative, personalized donor recognition opportunities were created including, but not limited to: special events, publications and scrapbooks, press releases, and premiums such as certificates and chairs. Ultimately 183 leadership gift donors were secured by the Campaign’s conclusion.

Also during the Campaign Planning, Quiet and Public phases, significant marketing efforts were established in support of the Campaign as well as the University’s overall reputation and visibility. These included the Campaign theme and graphic template, new print and online publications, expanded web presence and use of e-marketing, a branding initiative, advertising, videos, media outreach and new strategies and tactics related to social media.

Following the Campaign’s September 2008 public launch, the U.S. economy faltered, causing the Campaign’s leadership to move ahead general alumni appeals planned for later in the Campaign. The resulting tactic of a five-year Centennial Reunions cycle, engaging all alumni over that time period, would run from 2011 through 2015, aligning with the centennials of SMU’s founding in 1911 and its opening in 1915. In addition, repetitive donors at lower “participatory” levels would be highlighted in publications, such as the yearly Annual Report. Finally, a strategy was adopted to create a five-year promotional effort, The Second Century Celebration, to leverage excitement and to provide visibility for goals related to alumni participation as well as key campaign funding priorities. Among the notable new opportunities for support were Centennial Endowments, available only during the Celebration timeframe, which included operational start-up funding in addition to endowment resources. The Campaign end-date was reset to coincide with the Celebration end-date of December 2015, hoping it would follow a rebound in the U.S. economy.

Even with this conservative stance in place, the Campaign performed ahead of projections. The dedication of the George W. Bush Presidential Center in spring 2013 provided much-welcomed prestige and visibility for the University. Remarkably, the Bush Center also concluded a successful $500 million-plus campaign, separate from the SMU campaign, during this period.

In September 2013, with the Campaign having exceeded its financial target of $750 million, the SMU Board held a special session at which it raised the Campaign’s financial goal to $1 billion and established new goals related to endowed scholarships, endowed faculty positions and key capital projects.

All public goals were achieved well ahead of the Campaign’s conclusion date, including the significant goal of 25% annual participation by undergraduate alumni, achieved on May 31, 2015, the end of the final full fiscal year of the Campaign. This notable achievement affecting SMU’s national rankings joined other achievements supported by Campaign resources, including a rise in SAT scores, national recognition for SMU schools and departments and success in Division I athletics, among others.

At special ceremonies held September 24, 2015, the day marking the centennial of SMU’s opening on September 24, 1915, SMU President Turner was able to announce to those assembled in McFarlin Auditorium, as well as those watching worldwide over the web, that SMU had exceeded all of the Campaign’s goals, with 98 days remaining. And in December, at a historic gathering of the SMU Board of Trustees in the Rotunda of Dallas Hall, overlooking celebratory tree lighting extending down Bishop Boulevard to Mockingbird Lane, Dr. Turner reminded Board members of the University’s significant achievements under their watch as well as the enduring responsibility of preparing for new generations of students and faculty. At that event he quoted SMU’s first president, Robert S. Hyer: “Universities do not grow old but live from age to age in immortal youth.”

In April 2016 SMU plans to unveil a Campaign monument acknowledging the lead and major donors to the Campaign, as well as a website recognizing the over 65,000 contributors to the Campaign. In addition, two tangible gifts to the campus will be dedicated that day: the Fondren Foundation Centennial Reading Room in historic Fondren Library, symbolizing the centrality of SMU’s history, values and academic achievement to the University’s ongoing mission; and the Crain Family Centennial Promenade, celebrating the donations of over 10,000 individuals to SMU’s centennial commemoration and symbolizing the collective nature of the Campaign’s success, made possible only by the joining together of SMU Mustangs from across generations and geographic boundaries. Finally, on that day SMU will lower the centennial flag, which has flown over the main quad since the launch of the centennial commemoration in 2011, marking the end of one celebration and the beginning of another: a new century of SMU progress and development.

Conclusion and Observations

Through two successive campaigns, SMU has received well over $1.6 billion in commitments in support of institutional priorities. The success of these campaigns can be traced to three key factors among many: the generosity of donors, the leadership of the Board of Trustees and Dr. Turner and the quality of the institution’s offerings. A significant factor ensuring the most recent Campaign’s viability was the decision to fund the Campaign through an endowment assessment, ensuring continuity in staff and operations, all in support of a robust volunteer organization. As well, early leadership gifts ensured that the Campaign would launch with vigor and momentum, as did the persuasive strength of the Centennial Strategic Plan. Paramount, however, was the vision and sustained leadership of the president and Board, demonstrating to the SMU family the important nature of this shared enterprise. Going forward, opportunities for continued expansion of SMU’s outreach programs have been made possible, and in many cases accelerated by the Campaign’s success, among them expanding SMU’s national outreach and visibility, growing support for the operational budgets of the University and increasing the numbers of alumni and parents donors.
Even as we witness significant enhancements made possible by the Campaign, much of its impact will be felt far in the future in ways yet to be appreciated. By achieving record-breaking success on a number of fronts, the Campaign has positioned SMU most prominently among civic institutions in North Texas and private educational institutions across the entire state. Nationally, SMU’s reputation is rising in specific areas – academic, athletic, cultural – and collectively as a whole. As SMU Unbridled: The Second Century Campaign concludes, it places SMU on strong footing for the University’s next phase of development, with leadership continuity, experienced volunteers and staff and the broadest base of support in its history. Also equipped with a compelling and forward-looking new Strategic Plan, SMU is now poised to achieve even greater impact and success through its next major gifts campaign.
Summary Results

- Over $1.15 billion in commitments were received, the largest campaign receipts in the history of Texas private colleges and universities.

- Of that amount 58% percent was given for academic programs, positions and facilities; 25% for general campus improvements and student life programs; and 17% for athletics programs and facilities.
• Alumni giving represented 62% of the campaign total of $1.15 billion.

• An increase of 135% in gifts from outside Texas was achieved as compared to SMU’s last campaign.
- 26% of undergraduate alumni gave in the final fiscal year of the Campaign, double pre-campaign levels and notable nationally. 59.3% of all alumni gave to the Campaign over its complete timeframe.

- 689 new endowed scholarships were created, in addition to hundreds of new scholarships funded yearly. 54 new endowed faculty positions were created, bringing the total at SMU to 116. 24 major new facilities or major renovations were significantly funded – adding measurably to SMU’s academic, residential and campus space. Additionally, 68 major academic initiatives were supported by the Campaign.
• SMU’s goals for Student Support, Faculty and Academic Excellence and Campus Experience were all exceeded.

B. University Development

The University Development team was established during the quiet phase of The Second Century Campaign to help reach and exceed the campaign financial goal by focusing on cultivation, solicitation and closure of major gifts of $50,000 or more, as well as seven-figure commitments. Efforts to achieve these goals were successful due to strong working relationships with colleagues in all areas of DEA, and across the University.

In support of this goal staff was aligned by schools and campus units, national regions, and organization giving. The number of fundraisers for each team was determined through review of the constituent and major gift prospect pool and the funding priorities of the Campaign. Strategic goals and initiatives were identified by the schools and units and approved by the Board of Trustees. Fundraising teams worked with leadership to create the “case for giving.” Processes and guidelines were developed to chart clear expectations for the Campaign.

Fundraising efforts encouraged support of operational, endowment and capital initiatives. Performance metrics were established for major gift fundraisers based on the identified fundraising priorities for each area and the associated pool of prospects. Metrics included number of visits, solicitations, and dollar amount of gift closures. These metrics were documented in the new constituent relationship management database, Blackbaud Enterprise (BBEC), which was implemented in 2009.

An expanded volunteer infrastructure was also created to support the campaign goals. Led by the Campaign Leadership Council, more than 400 individuals, serving in 500 specific roles, were members of twenty-three Campaign Steering Committees that supported seven schools, three campus units, ten leadership cities, an international effort and two key constituency groups – alumni and faculty/staff. Leadership cities were identified based on locations of large alumni populations and student recruitment interest. Working with fundraising staff, these volunteers were instrumental in sharing campaign information and priorities with other SMU alumni, parents and friends, assisting with major giving efforts, participating in steering committee meetings, hosting events for the University and financially supporting SMU.

The new organizational structure achieved a broader comprehensive national and international campaign effort, elevating the visibility of SMU. When the public phase of the Campaign launched in 2008, volunteer committees were recruited for Cox School of Business, Dedman College of Humanities and Sciences, Dedman School of Law, Lyle School of Engineering, Meadows School of the Arts, Perkins School of Theology, Simmons School of Education and Human Development, Athletics, Central University Libraries, Campus and Student Life, as well as Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Fort Worth, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco, St. Louis, Washington D.C. and an International effort. During the 2011-2015 centennial period of the Campaign, two additional steering committees were established for Faculty/Staff and Alumni. Strategies were developed and executed for semester meetings of each Steering Committee, contributing to the Campaign’s three primary areas of focus: Student Quality, Faculty and Academic Excellence and Campus Experience. The leadership of these Campaign Steering Committees met with the Campaign Leadership Council twice yearly, in May and...
December, during the Campaign Executive Committee meetings, where they reported on fundraising progress and success in their areas.

To communicate fundraising priorities and share stories about the impact of Campaign gifts, Campaign Update newsletters were produced quarterly in collaboration with Integrated Marketing colleagues. In addition to marketing collateral was developed to promote specific funding initiatives and was effective in attracting new donor support.

Schools and Campus Units

Major gift development officers were assigned to and located in each of the seven schools and three departmental units (Athletics, Central University Libraries and Student Affairs). Each school or unit had a lead Director of Development who was responsible for the overarching fundraising strategy and higher-level major gifts of $100,000 or more for that constituency; some schools had an Assistant Director of Development who was responsible for major gifts of $25,000 - $100,000. The fundraisers worked with academic and administrative leadership and colleagues to develop strategies and major gift fundraising plans that facilitated closure of identified endowment, capital and annual funding priorities, and they assisted with or led strategy for celebration of seven-figure commitments and capital projects.

With the national economic downturn during the early days of the Campaign’s public phase, strategy adjusted to focus on multi-year annual gifts. The early success of the BBA Scholars Program in the Cox School, created in 2000, led to the launch of similar undergraduate scholars programs in the Meadows School, Dedman College and the Lyle School, and also to the endowment and naming of the Edwin L. Cox BBA Scholars Program. Graduate scholarship opportunities were successfully launched in Dedman Law, Cox School, Simmons School and Perkins School. These fundraising opportunities advanced the conversation about the importance of scholarships to support our undergraduate and graduate students, led to many new endowed scholarships in support of these areas, and contributed to the increase in average SAT scores and interest in graduate programs during the Campaign. Annual fundraising was also helpful for scholarship and student programming initiatives in Student Affairs, as well as program support for Central University Libraries. Through FY15, Athletics had six consecutive record-setting years of annual giving success for student-athletes, coaches and program support, due to strong Mustang Club and Circle of Champions contributions.

Collectively, a total of 54 endowed faculty and programmatic leadership positions were established. Centennial positions that provided operational and endowment support were a successful addition to the funding opportunities available to constituents. Significant support for academic programs and initiatives included the naming of two schools, the Annette Caldwell Simmons School for Education and Human Development and the Bobby B. Lyle School of Engineering; the naming of an academic department, the Huffington Department of Earth Sciences; and funding for many new and existing centers, institutes and programs.

Twenty-four key capital projects substantially funded during The Second Century Campaign, included five academic buildings; five residence halls and a dining facility; a new health center;
new band hall; athletics facilities for basketball, tennis and golf; and several projects that enhanced the beauty of the SMU campus.

Regions and Cities

In preparation for the launch of the Campaign, locations of large alumni populations and student recruitment interest were reviewed and identified to expand opportunities for engagement and giving. Dallas constituents, as expected, were very supportive of SMU during the Campaign. To share the Campaign message with more constituents outside of Dallas and Texas, and to focus on cultivation, solicitation and stewardship of major gifts in these areas, a new National Major Giving staff unit was created. Five national regions were defined and ten key cities within these regions were designated as Campaign Leadership Cities. The regions included Texas, West, Midwest, Northeast and Southeast. Leadership Cities included Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Fort Worth, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco, St. Louis and Washington D.C. An international effort was launched and well-supported by over forty volunteers in fourteen countries.

Key achievements included:

- Almost 11,000 personal visits with constituents outside of Dallas.
- Activity and giving results from donors outside of Texas increased
  - Number of donors – 21,469 vs. 13,322 donors in last campaign, an increase of 161%.
  - Dollar value of commitments – $144 million vs. $61.2 million in last campaign, an increase 235%.
- In the ten leadership cities, thirty-seven donors made commitments of $1 million or more and an additional 270 donors made commitments of $50,000-$999,999. These gifts were instrumental in funding new faculty positions, endowed scholarships, capital projects and operational support for areas across campus. Several of these gifts are included in the Results and Achievements by School, Campus Unit section of this report, below.
- More than 400 volunteers in major U.S. cities and abroad, including more than forty internationally, expanded the base of engagement and major gift support.
- International activity and giving results increased
  - Twenty-five events were held in fourteen countries on three continents.
  - Number of donors – 320 vs. 122 donors in last campaign, an increase of 381%.
  - Dollar value of commitments – more than $6 million vs. almost $3 million.

While these volunteers worked tirelessly in this Campaign, they also forged a new frontier for SMU in terms of volunteer involvement. With the time, talent and resources these volunteers invested, SMU was able to connect with thousands of alumni, parents and friends. A strong SMU community has developed in these ten leadership cities and five regions, where our constituents feel they can make a difference in the future of SMU.
Organization Giving

During the Campaign, cultivation and solicitation of foundations and corporations was achieved by fundraisers and leadership across campus, working in coordination with a centrally-based staff. Commitments from foundations, corporations and all other organizations reached $210,312,159, an increase of 53% over the total in A Time to Lead campaign ($137,245,410). Of this Second Century Campaign total, foundation commitments were 70% of the dollar value, reflecting continued generosity from many who have supported the University prior to the Campaign, in addition to gifts from new foundation donors. Corporate philanthropy was aided through strong alumni and community member connections; opportunities for increased support are promising.

Of the many gifts secured from organizations, several multi-million dollar commitments were received from significant local and regional foundations, including: The Meadows Foundation, The Moody Foundation, Communities Foundation of Texas, The Embrey Family Foundation, Texas Instruments Foundation, The Fondren Foundation, Hillcrest Foundation, Hoblitzelle Foundation, and the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation. National foundations such as Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, Doris Duke Charitable Fund, Kresge Foundation, Lilly Endowment, Inc. and the Robert A. Welch Foundation were also recognized donors of the Campaign. In addition, corporate relationships were enhanced with AT&T, IBM and Texas Instruments to include philanthropic and research support, mentorships, internships, executive engagement and other connections with the University. National firms and companies such as Exxon Mobil, Jones Day, Bank of America, Wells Fargo and Ernst & Young saw significant involvement through corporate philanthropy, alumni participation and in many cases service on SMU’s school executive boards.

Summary
The Second Century Campaign generated tremendous enthusiasm and financial support for SMU students, faculty, academic excellence and the campus experience. Continued collaboration throughout all areas of Development and External Affairs with other areas of the University is critical to build upon the momentum produced by activity in SMU’s schools, units, Campaign leadership cities and regions, and to broaden engagement opportunities for philanthropic and research funding from all constituents.
C. Alumni and Constituent Giving and Alumni Relations

As the SMU Board of Trustees and campaign leadership reviewed the accomplishments of A Time to Lead: The Campaign for SMU, they concluded that a key to SMU’s long-term fundraising success lay in expanding the base of financial support. In order to focus on this need, leadership established two campaign goals centered on giving by alumni. In addition to a goal of 50% of all alumni making a gift to the campaign at some point during the campaign, campaign leadership also established a goal to increase SMU’s annual giving participation rate from 12%, where it was before the campaign, to 25%. Reaching such a goal required a paradigm shift among alumni in their view of yearly support for the university.

The SMU Alumni Board took a leadership role in building a level of cultural awareness of, and belief in, a new message: an expanded alumni donor base will generate consistent support from alumni donors at all levels, leading to an increase in the value of their giving and building more support at the mid-levels and upper levels of annual giving. While all alumni giving is important to the University’s mission, giving by undergraduate alumni is reported to ranking authorities and has an impact on SMU’s reputation, informing decisions by prospective students and faculty to join the SMU community.

Building a culture of giving would require a highly coordinated program of frequent high-quality events; rewarding, hands-on volunteer opportunities; sophisticated and consistent direct marketing activity; engaging reunion programming, and active volunteer leadership boards and committees.

Events

Alumni Chapters were identified as the best avenue for increasing the frequency of events. While chapters had existed for some time, a more formal set of expectations were implemented requiring a minimum number of events each year. 18 alumni chapters prior to the campaign were increased to 52 chapters across the country and around the globe by the conclusion of the campaign. Chapters were charged with spreading the new message of annual support, they embraced this charge with a level of commitment never before seen. Chapters became the clearinghouse for local volunteers who would help recruit future students, serve as mentors and host externships, and celebrate class milestones through their reunion committees. Over the course of the campaign from 2008 to 2016, alumni chapter volunteers hosted thousands of alumni, parents, students and friends at more than 750 events.

Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Fort Worth, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco, Saint Louis, and Washington, D.C. were identified as target areas based on alumni population, concentration of wealth, and residency of current and prospective students. Campaign Steering Committees in each of these cities led major giving efforts and SMU hosted annual events in each city bringing a campaign update from university leadership and highlighting faculty members and academic programs. These events were open to area alumni, current parents, friends, as well as prospective students and their parents. Alumni chapters in each of these cities hosted events throughout the year to connect alumni with one another and to provide leadership encouraging annual giving in their regions.
Concurrent with the focus on chapters came a focus on young alumni. Graduates of the last decade had been identified as an anchor weight contributing to the low levels of giving participation. In the early stages of the Campaign 75% of the youngest alumni lived in Dallas so SMU established the Dallas Young Alumni (DYA) committee, working closely with the Young Alumni Board to engage the youngest alumni through a coordinated program of events and volunteer activities that would build relationships among these alumni and with the University, leading to a consistent level of yearly support.

In moving from a campaign environment, it will be essential for SMU to maintain and build on the momentum that has been generated in these campaign cities, as well as in other areas identified through the Campaign where alumni chapter activity is strong and supported by growing base of alumni and parent support. Working with school/unit Directors of Development to extend these efforts will allow SMU to deepen its relationships across the country and around the world, identifying and cultivating leadership for the next campaign.

Volunteerism and Engagement

Hands-on volunteer opportunities became the next focus of strategy as SMU observed higher giving rates among its most engaged alumni. Reunion committees, Local Alumni Student Recruiters (LASR), and the Hispanic (HA) and Black Alumni (BA) Boards were four programs that leveraged alumni volunteers prior to the Campaign. These existing programs were rebranded and introduced to attract and absorb greater numbers of volunteers. In addition to planning reunion activities and parties, Reunion Committees were charged with giving participation goals. During the course of the Campaign, the culture around reunion celebrations shifted from one focused on planning Homecoming reunion parties to one in which giving during reunion years was viewed as a natural part of the reunion experience.

Student Recruitment Volunteers (SeRVe) was launched to engage our alumni and parents in close partnership with the Office of Admissions to build a volunteer corps assisting staff members in recruiting the best and brightest prospective students. Hispanic and Black Alumni funded scholarships to reward and retain members of the Hispanic and Black student organizations, respectively, while also volunteering through SeRVe to recruit minority students.

SMU Connection was created as a means for connecting students with the power of the SMU Alumni Network. During the Campaign SMU Connection built opportunities for alumni-to-alumni mentorships; alumni-to-student mentorships; alumni hosting one-day externships; alumni serving as resume counselors at Resumania events; alumni serving as career advisors in Speed Networking events; and alumni serving as ongoing sources of career advice through an online program called “Ask an Alum.”

The Office of Alumni Relations and Engagement continues to identify alumni volunteer opportunities across campus that aid the University in accomplishing its objectives while providing alumni with meaningful experiences that will ensure their ongoing financial support. Over the course of the Campaign, 10,500 alumni have volunteered in 25 programs supporting students, alumni and prospective students. The success of this strategy is demonstrated by the annual giving participation among these involved alumni as 76% of these alumni volunteers made gifts to SMU during the final year of the Campaign, nearly doubling the rate of pre-campaign giving.

Giving

As a key strategy to develop a culture of giving among the broadest base of SMU alumni, the University invested resources into a consistent program of focused solicitations utilizing mail, phone, email and social media channels. This investment was urgently needed at the beginning of the Campaign and became critical to the ultimate success of the annual participation goal. The value proposition was carried out through letter three letter campaigns in the fall and three in the spring. Fall mailings typically focused on solicitations the SMU Fund and the SMU Scholarship Fund. Spring mailings from deans focused on fund raising for specific schools. Each of these campaigns included a series of email reminders following each letter. Scripts used by SMU student callers would reference the same priorities as the letters and email, as well. The long term effects of this integrated strategy became apparent as the messages leveraged existing events and well-known volunteers as ambassadors for giving to SMU.

The short-term value of the merger became apparent through giving challenges. “Fry the Frogs,” perhaps the most notable giving challenge of the Campaign, was a brief, two-week period of intensely frequent solicitations among young alumni. In addition to various events to focus on the Campaign, the Young Alumni Board recruited Class Ambassadors who reached out to their classmates with personal solicitations. Email and social media were the primary means of solicitations and were sent at least daily and sometimes twice daily – often using Class Ambassadors as the signers and senders. Implementing this annual challenge initiated and continued a shift in the giving behavior among SMU’s young alumni, as they took pride in being a leading force in increasing the participation rate among all SMU alumni.

This strategy of setting a participation goal, leveraging exciting events, and utilizing volunteers for personalized solicitations has set a model for giving challenges that appeal to a broader audience. In addition to Fry the Frogs, SMU executed four challenges, or “mini-campaigns” in the final year of the Campaign: Join the Stampede, President’s Challenge, Homecoming Challenge and the final, campaign concluding Horsepower Challenge. These resulted in incremental increases in the giving activity throughout the year which led to the highest annual participation on record.

In conjunction with its direct marketing efforts, the focus on a participation goal during The Second Century Campaign also caused a change in the way alumni reunions were orchestrated. As referenced above, giving to SMU became an expected component of the reunion experience and less resistance to this notion was seen as the Campaign continued. Serving on reunion committees was embraced by volunteers at every level, so that members of Campaign Steering Committees, Alumni and Young Alumni Board and the SMU Board of Trustees assumed leadership of their reunion committees and class giving goals. Two reunion giving cycles occurred during the course of the Campaign. In every instance, giving in the second reunion exceed that of the reunion held 5 years previously. Reunions continue to offer undergraduate alumni the opportunity to reconnect with SMU and with classmates. Moving forward, it is critical that we see the reunion gift as the first in a series, structured to continue through the next reunion cycle. Continued coordination among staff members and appropriate stewardship will allow personalized cultivation and solicitation of reunion alumni identified as major gift prospects to increase their giving between reunions. This will lead to a more consistent level of giving each year and will increase revenue supporting the University’s operational needs, as well.

Building a strong, sustainable giving program among all members of the SMU community was seen as important to building a base of alumni support. In The Second Century Campaign, SMU launched a giving campaign among its faculty & staff, which had not been done in A Time to Lead. The Campaign Steering Committee for Faculty & Staff included faculty and administrative volunteers from every school and unit across campus who, knowing and understanding of each unit’s culture and needs, led the giving effort in each of their areas. The results were impressive as giving by faculty & staff increased from 20.4% at the beginning of the Campaign to 67.9% in the final year. While giving by this constituency is not regularly reported by universities, a review of SMU’s cohort and aspirational schools yields none with such a high level of giving over a period of years.

As we continue to build a culture of giving among the SMU family, it was important to educate our students about the role of giving in a university setting. During the Campaign, the message of giving was shared with students at Mustang Corral and during Homecoming Challenges among student organizations. In the latter part of the Campaign, student leaders and the Campaign Steering Committee for Faculty & Staff initiated “STOP Day” (Starting Today Others Pay) during the spring as a way to educate students about how much of their educational experience is made possible by gifts from supporters. Students sign “thank you” cards addressed to scholarship donors and hear about the impact of giving on their SMU experience. Seniors are encouraged to make their gift to the University and all graduating seniors who are donors are honored by the president at a brunch before graduation. This event has become very popular and has increased giving among those who are about to become our youngest alumni.

Parents were included as a significant donor constituency in The Second Century Campaign. The Parent Leadership Council was established to recognize those parents giving at a minimum level of $2,500. In addition to giving, these parents also assist in recruiting prospective students and hosting new student “send off” parties in their hometowns. Membership in the PLC increased from 55 members to 289 members in the final year of the Campaign. Additionally, parents served on Campaign Steering Committees across the country and made major contributions to the campaign. Giving among parents increased from $1,040,000 before the Campaign to $6,510,000 in the final year of the Campaign. The impressive support provided by parents during The Second Century Campaign demonstrates the potential for giving by this constituency that must be cultivated more fully in the future. As we prepare for the next campaign, dedicating greater effort to the identification of these prospects along with a cohesive stewardship plan to recognize their generosity will be important to expanding the base of support among parents.

Providing its supporters with every opportunity to participate in the Campaign, SMU’s Office of Planned and Endowment Giving provides counsel in using assets other than cash to make contributions to SMU. This includes gifts that have immediate impact as well as those that will benefit the university in the future. Gifts of securities as well as real and personal property, along with beneficiary interests in retirement and insurance plans, bequests and trust designations provide current and future support for SMU. During A Time to Lead, deferred gifts benefitting SMU accounted for $82,000,000 of the total received while expectancies account for $110,000,000 in The Second Century Campaign. These, together with planned gifts that matured during the Campaign provided nearly $140,000,000 in dedicated support. The potential for giving among SMU’s donor community can be enhanced greatly by extending these opportunities to all major gift prospects, using non-cash assets in creative, tax efficient ways to expand their ability to benefit SMU.

The exceptional growth in endowment support has been recited in this report. In the earliest stages of The Second Century Campaign, the Office of Endowment Giving was established to coordinate the needs related to solicitation, documentation and stewardship of gifts to endowment. Working closely with the treasurer and general counsel, as well as with directors of development, a consistently applied system for establishing, stewarding and building endowments was instituted. Donors receive annual reports on endowed funds promptly each year and, increasingly, this office is leading efforts to provide annual reports to those supporting annual scholarships, as well. Maintaining this highly coordinated and effective strategy is essential to secure continued support for endowed giving at SMU.

D. Development Services

Development Services’ mission is to support the efficiency and effectiveness of our fundraising teams and to provide an excellent giving experience to our generous donors. The Second Century Campaign demanded a significant step up in systems and process to support a larger fundraising team, dramatic growth in number of donors, and an equivalent expansion in events and donor recognition services. This exciting potential made it clear that SMU needed to take advantage of next generation constituent relationship management technology to improve Services, and maximize the impact of our entire fundraising operation. SMU was the first university in North America to implement Blackbaud’s constituent relationship management solution (CRM) which now has become the system of choice for many of the leading universities in America, Canada, and the UK. This dynamic system supports the continued growth and coordination of fundraising activities across SMU while providing a central information view which allows us to be more donor-centric in all of our outreach. This strong base also provides a platform to more easily integrate other donor-facing services as we continue to expand donor stewardship and donor engagement opportunities in preparation for future fundraising initiatives.

The Services teams consist of four units: Records and Gifts Administration, Donor Relations, Research and Prospect Management, and Systems. Each of these units is intensely involved in testing and implementing regular updates to our Blackbaud CRM as well as working with our fundraising colleagues to define system and process changes that will support future growth. In addition to their role with our CRM they bring a high level of expertise to the unique aspects of their profession.

Records and Gifts Administration

This team accomplished the end-to-end gift processing (including the intake, deposit, designation, booking, documentation imaging) of approximately 311,900 campaign commitments. They work closely with university Finance in the gift accounting process and support monthly, quarterly, and annual reporting; ensuring IRS, CASE, & PCI compliance. They manage the record creation and maintenance of approximately our 1.3 million entity constituent database, the student/parent/alumni record lifecycle, and myriad defined record groups which support fundraising efforts. They manage a continuous pipeline of university and external data updates from contracted efforts. This unit will continue to explore opportunities for systematic automation of processes in support of ever larger throughput, faster turnaround, and increased cost-effectiveness.

Donor Relations

Core to the mission of Donor Relations is ensuring that SMU’s generous donors are appropriately acknowledged for their contributions, that donors receive an accurate and timely tax receipt for each gift, and that ongoing stewardship highlights the impact of our donors’ generosity. Additionally, this unit handles all permanent donor recognition, including plaques and portraits related to capital projects and they have managed the Centennial Promenade paver project. The SMU community’s enthusiastic response resulted in one of the largest university paver projects in the United States with almost 11,000 engraved pavers being installed. In support of our participation goal, this unit rolled out a special package for first-time donors to help communicate the importance of regular annual gifts. Two of the most visible projects involved new giving societies: Hilltop Society recognizing those who make consecutive annual gifts, and President’s Associates recognizing those giving annually at a higher level. Special coupon books highlighted some of each year’s special campaign opportunities across the University. This unit also worked closely with other DEA colleagues to ensure the quality of donor recognition lists in SMU’s Annual Report as well as a variety of other special publications.

Donor Relations supported the recognition of SMU’s largest campaign commitments with keepsake reminders of the university celebration events associated with those gifts. SMU’s largest lifetime donors were also celebrated during the Campaign through Mustang Award recognition events, overseen by the Office of Leadership Gifts.

Going forward Donor Relations will continue its emphasis on sharing information about the ongoing impact of donors’ gifts to the university. The SMU board resolution centralizing the leadership of Donor Relations initiatives guides this unit in collaborating with a range of campus partners. System tools will help us customize relevant messages for all donors while other initiatives will enable unique programming appropriate to those donors giving at the highest levels. The unit will also explore the creation of a new giving society as an opportunity to more fully recognize the lifetime giving impact of our most generous donors.

Development Research and Prospect Management

Using new Blackbaud CRM capabilities, this team worked closely with fundraising colleagues and their managers to implement SMU’s first comprehensive prospect management system. Such a system helps ensure strong coordination of our fundraising relationships even as the organization continues to expand in scope and number. Blackbaud offers a systematic process for the planning, recording, and reporting of significant moments in the relationship between prospective donors and the organization which lead to a new gift commitment. Using the resulting data, this unit partnered with the Assistant VP of University Development to track fundraising performance and progress. Research includes daily news alerts about prominent SMU constituents, and an annual review of every first-year student family in support of the Parents Leadership Council invitation process. Building a library of research resources, training materials, and documentation with digital resources available on the SMU intranet also led to increased support of Corporate and Foundation research.

Important next steps will be to further capitalize on Blackbaud CRM capabilities including an emphasis on mobile technology for prospect management and donor information “on the go.” Additionally, new technology and information services will improve our ability to support appropriate, timely, relevant, and cost-effective approaches to our many involved donors.

Development Management Systems

This unit is focused on our continuing realization of the potential of Blackbaud CRM as well as a range of systems that interact with the CRM in the service of our staff and donors. This team of development systems specialists handles our CRM upgrades and staffs our campus user help desk. They partner with Development colleagues to design, build, test, and implement enhancements to extend the capabilities of our fundraising team. This team also handles a wide range of custom data requests including a large number of segmented mailing lists.

The unit is focused on a number of high-potential initiatives to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of our fundraising process. End-user reporting will expand information access to our fundraising team and reduce overhead. Tools that integrate database information with marketing and communications messaging in donor-facing online tools hold substantial promise for leveraging existing resources. Increasing our alumni engagement with improved event capabilities as well as functionality for peer to peer referrals are also in the team’s short-term aspirations. Analytical tools including build-out of our data warehouse and initiatives with big data will refine our ability to align resources where opportunities are greatest.

In summary, as SMU aspires to larger goals we will see commensurate growth within the fundraising infrastructure and increasing complexity throughout the organization. Dynamic information systems, integrated tools, and highly-skilled staff will continue to be critical for achieving excellence in coordinating increasingly ambitious university-wide activities and initiatives. Data-driven decision making will highlight timely opportunities and inform the strategic allocation and management of these resources. Services is excited to play our part in helping realize SMU’s incredible potential in the years to come.

E. Public Affairs

The Office of Public Affairs was an active and strategic partner in the success of SMU Unbridled: The Second Century Campaign, especially during the public phase, 2008-15. A summary follows:

Coordination

Following the successful model developed for A Time to Lead: The Campaign for SMU, marketing and media relations supporting The Second Century Campaign were integrated into the duties of the Office of Public Affairs, avoiding fragmentation, duplication and proliferation of mixed messages. In this way, DEA avoided the necessity of hiring several additional communications staff, though a few more staff members would have helped meet growing responsibilities, especially in the final years of the Campaign, coinciding with the Centennial. Public Affairs produced communications specifically for the Campaign’s solicitations and donor recognition, but also wove campaign promotions into all its communications to provide breadth, repetition and consistency.

Media Relations

Sections of this report will outline some of the materials and projects that supported SMU Unbridled. One strength provided by Public Affairs was a close relationship with the philanthropy columnist of The Dallas Morning News, Bob Miller. He agreed to announce every gift of $1 million or more in his column, if he could be the first to do so. Gift announcements thus were timed so that every two or three weeks an SMU gift story would appear, providing Mr. Miller with ample copy for his column and giving SMU the repetition needed to communicate ongoing progress. His column was a “must read” for much of the Dallas elite who make up the generous donor community supporting area institutions.

In addition, when SMU planned a major announcement beyond the scope of a Bob Miller column, such as the announcement of the $1 billion achieved, Public Affairs worked with the editor of The Dallas Morning News to provide an advance exclusive, often resulting in highly visible placements. Public Affairs also reached out to the Editorial Board of The Dallas Morning News, resulting in several supportive editorials, including the front page. Regular lunches with Bob Miller nourished the professional relationship.

Reputation and Credibility

Although promoting the Campaign in tandem with duties such as student recruitment marketing and research promotion was sometimes a challenge to coordinate, Public Affairs was committed to putting campaign support at the center of its responsibilities. In addition, it was widely understood in Public Affairs that donors respond not only to direct communications soliciting specific gifts, but also to the stature and reputation of the institution asking for support. Respect and reputation provide the platform for cultivating support. As Dr. Turner frequently commented, donors want to support a winner.
Toward this end, Public Affairs was active in clarifying issues and telling SMU’s story when controversies erupted that could cause donors to question the worthiness of the University. Examples included sexual assaults and related policies, Title IX investigations, public misbehavior on the part of two deans, the impact of Ebola on campus, NCAA sanctions, staff cutbacks via OE2C, racial tensions and other issues covered aggressively by local and often national media. Public Affairs aimed to protect SMU’s reputation so that donors — and prospective students who might invest their futures with us — would want to be associated with SMU.

Likewise, the campaign itself bolstered SMU’s reputation. The regularity of campaign stories provided a much-needed counterpoint to some of the negative issues outlined above. Gift announcements were guaranteed positive stories and helped to provide balance.

Campaign Visibility

During the public phase of the Campaign, SMU News and Communications helped earn more than 3 million media mentions of SMU (including social media), many of those in direct or indirect support of the Campaign.

In addition to traditional media, the News and Communications staff used the SMU website and social media channels to amplify campaign news to thousands of Twitter, Facebook, YouTube and Instagram users — many of them SMU alumni.

As noted, the foundational piece of the department’s campaign support came in the form of gift announcements as well as related feature stories. SMU news staff wrote and distributed nearly 200 gift and related campaign announcements and features. And approximately 300 videos were created in support of the Campaign — highlighting impact through student and faculty accomplishments and the campus experience, made possible by campaign funding. In addition, News and Communications reached out to media in key campaign cities/regions to yield media placements beyond Dallas.

A key message regarding campaign impact and reputation-building was that additional faculty endowments would attract and retain professors who would be outstanding teachers and prolific researchers, joining an already strong corps of scholars. News and Communications promoted this message by aggressively offering faculty experts to the external media to comment on societal developments, drawing from their research expertise. In a typical year during the Campaign, News and Communications scored 148,232 traditional print placements in such venues as The New York Times, Forbes and National Geographic. The Public Affairs team also earned 739,011 social media mentions each year for SMU and placed stories with traditional non-print media such as CNN, BBC World Radio and ABC News. Subjects ranged from Cox business expertise on the Federal Reserve to research on earthquakes in Texas to Guild Hall evolutions in cyber space.

In addition, as new campaign-funded initiatives came online, Public Affairs became active in promoting the benefits and impact of these SMU advancements. Examples include an entire new school — The Annette Caldwell Simmons School of Education and Human Development — as well as programs such as the Embrey Human Rights Program and other specialized centers.

News and Communications also supported media outreach for the Meadows Museum’s 50th anniversary and the Meadows Foundation’s major gift commitment. The staff produced an eight-page insert in The Dallas Morning News on the Meadows 50th and another in spring 2015 on overall campaign impact. A third is planned for Founders’ Day in April 2016.

A major development drawing international attention was the 2013 opening of The George W. Bush Presidential Center. Although the opening was organized by staff and contract employees of the Center, SMU played a major role in preparing for and welcoming more than 10,000 visitors and more than 700 media from around the world. This event had SMU campaign implications because the University and the Center share many of the same donors. In years preceding the opening, while coinciding with SMU’s campaign, Public Affairs also navigated ongoing national visibility based on objections to the project by some faculty and members of The United Methodist Church. The way SMU managed this controversy could have had a major negative impact on its reputation and credibility among constituents — with campaign fallout. Literally, the world was watching SMU during those years.

Marketing Support

After working with The Richards Group on a suggested campaign title, Integrated Marketing in Public Affairs designed the Unbridled logotype, communicating momentum, energy and a forward focus. Public Affairs also designed an elegant and consistent template for all campaign communications, as well as consistent and compelling messaging.

Integrated Marketing in Public Affairs provided an overarching brand framework for campaign materials and centennial communications — requiring coordination because both efforts were occurring simultaneously in the latter years (2011-15). These communications were executed consistently to support efforts across Development and External Affairs. Although a retrospective survey would be too time-consuming to undertake at this time, the Integrated Marketing staff estimates that over the course of the Campaign and centennial, more than 3,000 projects were completed in support of both. As examples, Integrated Marketing:

- Created a campaign brand — logo, visual vocabulary and messaging used in presentations, videos, website pages and postings, and campaign materials such as stationery, invitations, proposals and programs, used for numerous events.
- Launched first brand guidelines in more than a decade.
- Conceptualized and produced messaging and content for Centennial Hall, working with DEA colleagues and Freeman Associates on technical and design support.
- Conceived and produced several books:
  - Unbridled Vision, the first SMU picture book in 25 years
- Coordinated development of SMU’s first master brand, “World Changers Shaped Here,” which highlights the transformation and impact achieved through the Campaign.
• Launched brand ads across print, television and website.
• Incorporated “World Changers Shaped Here” messages and visuals into materials ranging from admission outreach and athletics events to the Mustang Express shuttle.
• Aligned school and area marketing efforts with master brand through development of printed materials and websites.
• Coordinated ads on SMU-owned billboard along Central Expressway used for DEA marketing, undergraduate admission and other units such as Meadows Museum.
• Created new 30-second television ad that extended “World Changers Shaped Here” message and highlighted campaign impact.

Alumni and Donor Outreach

Integrated Marketing created new communications vehicles for audiences consisting of high-priority prospects and donors:

• Launched Vision newsletter to support campaign quiet phase and produced quarterly Campaign Update newsletter.
• Created comprehensive annual reports and endowment reports, highlighting campaign-enabled achievements.
• Produced several high-end multimedia and hundreds of print proposals on such projects as Residential Commons, Ford Research Center, Moody Coliseum renovations and gifts to every school. Supported relaunch of campaign when $1 billion goal was announced, including new/revised articulation, branding, video and website.
• Developed advertising celebrating the $1 billion announcement that appeared in print ads with a total circulation of more than 4 million, in airport ads that were shown to as many as 6 million passengers and on the SMU-owned billboard along Central Expressway.
• Created content and materials to support Founders’ Days, including Inside SMU, the President’s Briefing and the President’s Associates.
• Drove attendance to campaign and centennial events that created positive experiences for visitors witnessing progress in person.
• Created template for “red envelope” projects and events.
• Executed communications, photography and staging for dozens of gift announcements, dedications and groundbreakings, as well as larger events, including:
  o Dedications included those for Annette Simmons and Harold Clark Simmons Hall (forthcoming); Residential Commons; Mustang Band Hall; tennis complex; Moody Coliseum enhancements; and Miller Center at SMU-in-Taos;
  o Luncheons celebrating the 100th anniversary of the campus master plan; honoring donors of endowed faculty positions and student support;
  o Meadows Foundation gift announcement and Museum anniversary celebration;
  o Centennial Commemorations and Homecoming weekends.
• Partnered with George W. Bush Presidential Center to support the “Hail to the Chief” exhibit and produced materials for all SMU events related to the Center’s opening.
• Supported marketing for the designated centennial years, celebrating the libraries, master plan, faculty, and students.

Integrated Marketing helped alumni giving and relations strengthen reunions, annual giving and ongoing outreach, with the aim of increasing alumni giving.

• Upgraded websites and expanded use of streaming video, blogs and other technologies; launched comprehensive mobile website.
• Supported annual solicitations, including Horsepower Challenge, Fry the Frogs and Mustang Club drive every year, culminating in the extensive work around Join the Stampede that was a key component in finally reaching a 25 percent participation goal:
  o Created Join the Stampede theme, message, graphics and launch video.
  o Executed online and print experiences in conjunction with each milestone and mini campaign: Friday Night Stampede, All in for Homecoming, President’s Centennial Challenge and Find Your Cause one-day giving challenge.
  o Expanded content that increased pride and a sense of impact, including monthly feel-good emails and videos that told compelling SMU stories.
  o Integrated “Give Now” buttons onto every page of website and into email template for all emails sent throughout the year.
• Contributed to increase in reunion attendance through online registration.
• Updated alumni and campaign regional event presentations.
• Strengthened open rates and click rates for e-newsletter — first quarterly SMU Connections, later monthly SMU Update, with nine regional segments.
• Grew Facebook account from fewer than 3,500 fans to more than 50,000.
• Launched Instagram account and grew it to nearly 4,000 followers.
• Enhanced 2012 bowl game marketing and blogging for record social media metrics.
• Leveraged expanded social media presence to reach more than 550,000 people during Centennial Homecoming week and communicate the $1 billion impact of the Campaign.
• Supported Centennial alumni census and directory.
• Supported implementation of expanded online tools integrated with Blackbaud, such as alumni website, recurring giving, e-mail marketing and online directory.

As noted, campaign visibility also supported reputation enhancement with an impact on student recruitment, as prospective students witness donor support that will enrich their student experience.

In addition, parallel with the Campaign, Integrated Marketing supported undergraduate student recruitment efforts, working with the Office of Admission. These collaborative efforts doubled the number of applicants, substantially increased incoming students’ admission test scores and diversified the student body ethnically and geographically — all of which were critical to demonstrate campaign impact on student quality. Although not itemized here, these initiatives included updated materials and e-marketing, a revised website, geo-targeting, increased high school counselor outreach, and creation of Spanish- and Mandarin-language microsites.
SMU Magazine Coverage

As the University’s flagship publication for more than 100,000 alumni, donors and friends, SMU Magazine actively promoted SMU Unbridled: The Second Century Campaign, both in print and online, beginning with the fall/winter 2008 issue, though the magazine had a strong history of reporting fund-raising results as part of campus news. A total of 15 magazine issues (two per year) promoted the Campaign in various ways, with more than 60 articles, including:

- Renamed the Hilltop Giving section to the Campaign Update section.
- Devoted highly visible front and back covers to campaign achievements.
- Revitalized its alumni news section with more alumni programming information and human interest content to help bond readers with the University.
- Published frequent campaign ads – promoting bricks for the centennial promenade, Horsepower Challenge, Join the Stampede, centennial merchandise and others.

In determining content that was not directly related to the Campaign, SMU Magazine editors chose feature topics highlighting the many ways in which the Campaign is transforming the educational experience. Examples include endowed faculty research and outstanding students attending SMU through scholarships. Because the main audience for SMU Magazine is composed of alumni and donors, such coverage helped to instill pride and show tangible progress.

Community Outreach

Community outreach promoted the Campaign and centennial by providing opportunities for SMU to connect with the surrounding area, a major source of alumni and other donor support. Part of the Campaign’s goal has been to elevate SMU as a thought leader and partner in supporting the national and global impact of Dallas-Fort Worth. One objective is to solidify connections with the community, with its historic ties to SMU. Another is to build bridges with other areas such as South and West Dallas. Community Outreach:

- Created new initiatives, such as SMU participation in local parades and enhanced Homecoming parade participation by the community.
- Collaborated with campus colleagues on visitor amenities, such as highway signage.
- Worked with local businesses to have them light their buildings to show support for signature SMU events and major athletics victories.
- Engaged more than 250 businesses along Hillcrest and in six shopping centers to hang posters for Centennial Homecoming events.
- Supported the Mayor’s Summer Reading Club (now three years going).
- Positioned SMU as a community partner via the Dallas Heart Walk.
- Expanded diversity outreach by participating in MLK parade and facilitated meetings with the MLK center and SMU Offices of Community Engagement and Multicultural Affairs.
- Implemented outreach to Dallas ISD and Richardson ISD schools, hosting five tours on campus, serving 300+ students, with two more tours scheduled in 2016.
- Established SMU’s Community Common Reading, inviting community members to read the SMU “common reading” book and hear the author’s presentation on campus.
• Initiated an SMU-branded toll tag, resulting in a sponsorship for athletics.
• Participated in University Crossing Public Improvement District.
• Expanded “Neighborhood News” website and increased Twitter follower base.
• Worked with Centennial University Committee and Centennial Host Committee.

Summary

In support of the Campaign and centennial, Public Affairs planned and created communications implemented campus-wide. This visibility helped to build a platform of credibility from which SMU could promulgate its key messages, cultivate and recognize donors, strengthen relationships with external influencers and, in all, create a climate for DEA and SMU to do their best work.
F. Program Services

The Program Services team served as the primary events arm of The Second Century Campaign. With 11 extremely talented staff members, the team executed an average of 64 unique events each year of the Campaign (with many of those events consisting of several smaller sub-events). Until 2011, a second events department existed within DEA which was responsible for additional events. At the end of 2011, with the retirement of a senior staff member, the two departments merged, thus the number of events directly managed by Program Services grew, averaging 78 unique events each year since that time.

Strategically, events were used as key markers in the Campaign. As guests walked into a transformed Moody Coliseum on the evening of September 11, 2008, they were reminded of SMU’s rich history; as the evening continued, and as the launch of The Second Century Campaign was celebrated publicly on the morning of September 12, guests were challenged to look ahead to the unbridled future of SMU... “and leap.” From that point forward, it was evident that campaign events would be deliberate, appropriate, celebratory and high quality.

In order to be more thoughtful, DEA improved remarkably in collaboration and cross-functional coordination and communication for these events. This new emphasis on collaboration allowed the team to be more focused on donor relations, messaging and the guest experience for events. There were many types of campaign events including large celebrations, gift announcements, groundbreakings, building openings and donor receptions and luncheons. As often as possible, events were tied to signature SMU events: Homecoming, the centennial-related Founders’ Day and Board of Trustee meetings, to capitalize on guests being at SMU for those purposes.

With SMU’s centennial celebration came an influx of events that allowed SMU to continue to celebrate the past, and to merge the past with the present and future of SMU. There were many opportunities throughout the centennial to bring new guests to events and either remind them of the SMU they forgot or introduce them to SMU for the first time. Many campaign events now had an opportunity to “be centennialized” with messaging and moments.

The opening of the George W. Bush Presidential Center also brought on an influx of events. SMU and DEA partnered with the Bush Center all along the way for signature events – from the moment the Center was announced, to the groundbreaking, when the Bush Center still had limited events staff, to the facility topping-off ceremony, and ultimately to the dedication in 2013. SMU celebrated the partnership during Founders’ Day that year and created a Block Party for approximately 12,000 guests – both friends of SMU and the Bush Center from across the world. Program Services has continued to work closely with the Bush Center and President and Mrs. Bush’s staff, meeting regularly, and involved at some level most times when either of them attend an event on campus.

Some of SMU’s most high-profile events during this time were those that existed regardless of the Campaign, but through fundraising became extremely significant to the Campaign. Sponsorships for the Tate Lecture Series were counted in campaign totals, and patrons had an opportunity throughout the Campaign to give directly to an endowment to benefit the President’s Scholars Program. Sponsorships for the PwC SMU Athletic Forum including title and luncheon sponsors as well as season table sponsors also were counted in campaign totals. Campaign and centennial messages were prevalent throughout both programs, as the audience members ranged from some of SMU’s closest friends and leadership donors to those whose only connection to SMU is at these events. Program Services also worked closely with the Tower Center to create several Medal of Freedom events as well as with the Maguire Center for Ethics and Public Responsibility to create the J. Erik Jonsson Ethics Award each year.

Program Services worked with key departments in DEA and on campus to produce signature events such as the Distinguished Alumni Award and major campus events hosted by the Office of the President. Throughout the Campaign, Program Services also became a resource to many campus departments as they were producing events – from large events like Commencement to intimate affairs such as a dinner for 20 guests. The team encouraged best practices, focusing on setting a University standard for events and consulted with many while they managed their own events. Program Services also contributed to SMU’s new focus on community outreach and DEA’s improved partnership with SMU admissions. Tate Lecture Series student forums and the Hart Global Leaders Forum brought high school students to campus, and for many, it was the first time those students were on a college campus; so in addition to exposing them to SMU, they were also introduced to a diverse group of speakers. The Tate student forum moderator and student representative to the Board of Trustees in 2014-15 both attended Tate student forums all throughout high school and the forums played a significant role in both students’ interest in SMU. Athletic Forum luncheon sponsorships were structured to allow sponsors to connect the featured speaker with a local school or community organization.

As the primary events arm of The Second Century Campaign, the Program Services team was proud to create many public moments for SMU and looks forward to celebrating the conclusion of the Campaign with several signature events on Founders’ Day in April 2016.

SMU raises record $1.15B
Largest total for private Texas university to fund scholarships, buildings

Southern Methodist University will announce Friday that it has raised $1.15 billion for student scholarships, new faculty positions, buildings and more in a campaign that ended in December.

It’s the largest amount ever raised by a private university in Texas, and a feat few private schools around the country have accomplished, SMU leaders said.

“The future for SMU and Dallas is brighter because of the incredible generosity of donors to this campaign,” said Gerald J. Ford, an SMU trustee and graduate who helped lead the campaign.

SMU started its Second Century Campaign in 2006, with the goal of raising $750 million. As donations poured in, campus leaders bumped that target up to $1 billion.

Many fruits of the fundraising are already visible. The school, which enrolls more than 11,000 students, has added five new dorms and a dining hall so sophomores can live on campus along with freshmen. The schools of education, theology and engineering all have new buildings. The Mustang band has a new hall for practicing and performing. There’s a new tennis complex with a dozen courts, and a renovated basketball arena.

On Friday, SMU breaks ground for an aquatics center with an Olympic-size swimming pool.

Donations also are going to people and programs. The law school, for instance, now has a center that aids victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, sex trafficking and other crimes against women. The education school is working with nonprofit groups and public schools in West Dallas to help lift families there out of poverty.

And SMU is using the campaign money to nearly double the number of endowed faculty positions from 62 to 116. Endowed professorships tend to be more prestigious and pay higher salaries, so they’re a powerful recruiting tool for colleges.

“It helps you get faculty that are more renowned for scholarship,” President R. Gerald Turner said. Those professors do research and produce knowledge that can fuel economic development well beyond SMU’s borders, he said.

From Northeastern University in Boston to the University of Miami, a growing number of colleges and universities are pursuing billion-dollar-plus campaigns as they try, like SMU, to elevate their national status and prestige.

Until now, only one private college in Texas had raised that much money — Rice University in Houston with $1.08 billion in a campaign that ended in 2013.

The University of Texas at Austin, which is public, raised $1.1 billion in a campaign that wrapped up in 2014. Just last November, Texas A&M upped the philanthropic ante and said it planned to raise $4 billion.

Some experts worry that the fundraising arms race could leave some students behind — especially those from low-income or working-class families.

SMU is one of only 95 colleges or college systems in the country with endowments worth more than $1 billion.

“They are part of a very elite group,” said Danette Howard, a vice president at the nonprofit Lumina Foundation, which promotes equity and access in higher education. “I would say that with those kinds of resources — and the ability to raise those resources — does come responsibility.”

At SMU, 12 percent of freshmen and 16 percent of all undergraduates are considered low-income. Most four-year colleges enroll a much greater share of poor or working-class families, Howard said.

“When you get to these very elite institutions, they’re mostly enrolling students who are from higher-income families,” she said. “That perpetuates this sense of stratification.”

helped lead the drive.

SMU and other elite schools should devote more of their financial aid to bright, successful students who otherwise couldn’t afford to attend, Howard suggested.

SMU leaders say they’re doing just that. Donors gave money for 689 new student scholarships, including those for transfer students, veterans and those still in the military. While many scholarships are based on academic or leadership merits, they also help students with financial need, officials said.

“The idea that private universities are only elite and not accessible is an old stereotype that continues to get perpetuated,” said Brad Cheves, SMU’s vice president for development and external affairs. “We are seeking the best, brightest and most able regardless of background, and making this the kind of university that’s reflective of society.”

SMU’s campaign is called the Second Century Campaign in honor of the college’s 100th birthday. SMU was founded in 1911 and opened in 1915 after prominent families donated land and Dallas leaders lobbied the Methodist church for it.

Turner said that while SMU is proud to have raised more than $1 billion, that’s not the ultimate goal.

“The dollar amount is really only the means to an end,” he said, “and the end is to do things that make your school better.”

SMU ends Second Century campaign with more than $1.1 billion raised

A billion bucks and change is a lot of money no matter how it adds up. But Southern Methodist University has special reason to crow about that gobsmacking total. Its just-completed Second Century fundraising campaign drew on support from nearly 60 percent of its alumni. That’s a remarkable level of commitment from former students. The $1.15 billion total is the largest amount ever raised by a private university in Texas, and it puts SMU among a small class of universities nationwide to have done so. Some 54 new faculty positions have been endowed, along with nearly 700 scholarships, and construction projects across campus are underway or are already complete. Congratulations! A stronger SMU means a stronger North Texas.
Building on the vision of SMU’s founders more than 100 years ago, the generous donors to The Second Century Campaign are enabling SMU to recruit the best students, support faculty and academic excellence and enhance the University’s unique campus experience.
