

ANTH 1321

Anthropology and You

This course is an introductory course to the four fields of anthropology (socio-cultural, biological, linguistics, and archaeology). For each of the four subfields, students will be given the opportunity to participate in hands-on learning projects that emphasize collecting and analyzing data in each of the four subfields. The projects include garbology, mini-ethnographies, modern graffiti analysis, and an introduction to human skeletons. The main goal of the course is to show students how anthropology can transform and inform your world view.

Tuesday/Thursday

Dr. Karen Lupo (klupo@smu.edu)

11:00am—12:20pm

Hyer Hall 104