Non-degree credit students and visiting summer students are applicants for admission who wish to enroll in SMU courses for credit, but who do not intend to pursue an SMU degree program. This category of students normally includes 1) degree-seeking students in good standing and visiting from another four-year college or university, 2) students who have already earned a degree and want to take undergraduate pre-requisites in preparation for graduate programs such as medical school, and 3) students needing credit for other reasons.

Admission as a non-degree seeking or visiting student does not qualify a student for admission to a degree program at SMU.
