

IMPACT Symposium 2012

Fall 2012

PRIVACY: FROM DOMESTIC SPACE TO CYBERSPACE

Dan Haybron - Saint Louis University

October 30-31, 2012

This IMPACT Symposium involved an interdisciplinary conversation about the past, present and future of our notions of privacy. The keynote speaker, Dr. Frederick Chang (21CT Inc., Austin, Texas), and faculty panelists (see below) explored the multiple meanings and impacts of the concept of privacy from a number of disciplinary perspectives tackling its historical roots, its modes of representation, and the arenas of social life in which it is operative and often challenged—addressing everything from consumerism and credit, to markets, to health, to security, to intimacy.

Faculty Panelists

- George Holden, Department of Psychology
- Alexis McCrossen, Department of History
- Beth Newman, Department of English
- Sukumaran Nair, Lyle School of Engineering
- Santanu Roy, Department of Economics
- Mary Spector, Dedman School of Law

Moderator

Lee Cullum, Journalist