In Search of Ice Age Americans

Spring 2020 – TTh – 8:00 – 9:20am (Honors)

It is widely accepted that the first Americans arrived here over 14,000 years ago, a time when the earth was in the waning grip of the Ice Age. Ascertaining who these colonists were, where they came from, when and how they got here, what the climate and environment was like at the time of their arrival, and how they adapted to their new landscape has proven challenging – if at times highly controversial. The course will explore these past peoples and their world, drawing on rich and occasionally conflicting evidence from archaeology, glacial geology and ecology, linguistics, skeletal biology and ancient DNA. Satisfies Ways of Knowing, Natural and Applied Sciences Depth, Information Literacy Proficiency, and Human Diversity Proficiency.
