Anthropology: A Four-Field Approach

Fall 2020 - TTh - 8:00-9:20am

What is anthropology? This course introduces students to the four subdisciplines of anthropology: sociocultural anthropology, linguistics, archaeology, and biological anthropology. Come explore different global cultures, languages, and biological diversity around the world. As part of this journey, we investigate ancient cultures and the evolution of humankind. In this class, we learn through a series of hands-on learning assignments, in-class activities and discussions, as well as writing assignments. Satisfies Individuals, Institutions, & Cultures Breadth and Writing Proficiency.

The Science of Our Past: Introduction to Archaeology

Fall 2020 – TTh – 12:30-1:50pm

How do scientists study human societies and ancient civilizations? What types of evidence do they use? What do their findings indicate about how people lived in the past? This class examines how and why archaeologists study evidence of past human behavior. We will learn through lecture, videos, as well as hands-on labs that emphasize analyses and interpretations of artifacts and other archaeological materials. Satisfies Science and Engineering Breadth, Historical Context Breadth, and Information Literacy Proficiency.

ANTH 3319

Humanity & Global Environmental Change

Fall 2020 – TTh – 12:30-1:50pm

This class examines interactions between human populations and their environments. We will explore relationships among population size, technology, climate, and behavior in living societies worldwide. Particular attention will be given to understanding the environment and current environmental problems, such as water scarcity, disasters, air quality, food, and waste. Satisfies History, Social, & Behavioral Sciences Depth, Information Literacy Proficiency, and Global Engagement Proficiency.

Special Topics in Anthropology: Build It, Hack It, Fix It

Fall 2020 – T – 2:00-4:50pm

Infrastructures connect people, places, ideas, and resources (think: water, transportation, and communication systems). This class draws on issues in anthropology, environmental studies, and infrastructure studies/STS to examine the politics and impacts of infrastructures, especially related to social difference and resource access. The course covers the relationships between environments and infrastructures, and asks how we can manage these systems in the Anthropocene. Themes include materiality, sociotechnical systems, cities, communication technologies, differential access to resources, roads/transits, water, energy, maintenance & repair, and nature as infrastructure. The course asks you to look at infrastructure as politics, and to become more attuned to the webs that we rely on in day-to-day life.
