ABOUT THE HART CENTER

BOBBY B. LYLE SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING AND THE HART CENTER FOR ENGINEERING LEADERSHIP

THE HART CENTER FOR ENGINEERING LEADERSHIP SHAPES LYLE STUDENTS INTO EXCEPTIONALLY SUCCESSFUL ENGINEERS.

The Hart Center at SMU-Lyle takes the leadership and professional development of our students as seriously as their technical education. Our process starts with the Hart Leadership Assessment, a benchmark tool that reveals a student's leadership strengths and identifies areas for growth. Leadership coaches help students analyze results and create personal development plans, which are updated and refined throughout a student's academic experience. Through student leadership positions, co-op work experiences and internship opportunities available at SMU and in Dallas-Fort Worth's thriving business environment, students practice skills and challenge themselves continually to reach their leadership and professional goals. The Hart Center prepares Lyle students for the real business of engineering, giving students the tools they need for the college to career transition and encouraging lifelong personal and professional growth.

Hart Leadership Framework

The Hart Leadership Framework—our guide to leadership and professional development—emphasizes these key elements of leadership growth:

- Personal
- Relational
- Functional
- Contextual

Focus Areas and Related Competencies

Personal Leadership (Base of Arch) - Effective Leadership is built on a solid foundation. Personal leadership encompasses the self-awareness, knowledge, and personal management required of a leader. Leadership development begins with self-discovery: acknowledging personal strengths, shortcomings, and developing one's capacity for self-management. Leaders take responsibility for personal and professional development, a commitment that enriches them regardless of the career path they choose.

A Good Personal Leader:

Is Self-Aware: Exhibits knowledge of personal values, strengths, shortcomings, and developmental opportunities. Uses self-assessment strategies to inform personal growth and development.

Learns Intentionally: Has knowledge of personal learning style and leverages this knowledge to enhance personal performance, knowledge of self, others, and leadership ability.

Communicates Effectively: Has the ability to communicate effectively through a variety of methods and media and within a range of contexts.

Relational Leadership (Left side of Arch) - We believe success hinges on an ability to work with and through others. Leaders must learn to form and maintain quality relationships built on mutual understanding, respect, compromise, and diligence. This capacity increases as leaders learn to understand differences, value diversity, inspire people, and hold others accountable.

A Good Relational Leader:

Develops Relationships: Creates a positive, welcoming environment; sees issues from multiple points of view; and builds effective inter- and intra-group relationships.

Embraces Diversity & Differences: Recognizes the value of different perspectives, skill sets, and people; is able to facilitate productive outcomes in diverse groups.

Engages Others: Enables others to step up and lead; creates conditions for others to shine; generates collective commitment and learning.

Functional Leadership (Right side of Arch) - Engineering leaders have a responsibility, where possible, to help workgroups and organizations operate more effectively. All Lyle students have the opportunity to learn skills and processes that positively influence group functions, outcomes, and their ability to learn from experience. These practices are equally important for positional leaders as well as for members of self-directed teams.

A Good Functional Leader:

Sets Direction: Coordinates members and maintains accountability for effective outcomes. Sets direction, communicates expectations and monitors progress.

Champions Effective Processes: Establishes systems and processes that facilitate efficient and effective outcomes.

Solves Problems: Facilitates effective problem identification and solving strategies; identifies and cultivates resources; delivers results.

Contextual Leadership (Keystone) - Leadership is best learned through practice. No leadership theory, model, or media resource conveys the fluid nature of leading in context. Environments are shaped by a dynamic array of situations and circumstances, where conditions change as people engage and disengage. Experience helps Lyle leaders learn to assess their context and appropriately adapt their style.

A Good Contextual Leader:

Seeks Innovative Solutions: Displays the courage to initiate positive change, is innovative, and will risk failing in front of peers.

Upholds Ethics & Integrity: Knowledgeable of and committed to a meaningful set of ethical guidelines and principles. Actions are consistent with personal values.

Keeps Strategic Perspective: Able to evaluate issues from multiple perspectives and identify the core problem; considers options and trade-offs; makes effective use of resources.

ABOUT THIS GUIDE

The Hart Leadership Field Guide is a resource for leadership development in the Lyle Engineering school and throughout the broader SMU community. This guide is intended to show you how leadership development occurs throughout the collegiate experience; by merely getting involved you can grow as a leader.

To map opportunities to competencies within the

Hart Leadership Framework, the Hart team engaged in one or more of the following activities:

- Interviewed program directors, faculty and staff members across campus
- Scanned websites and course descriptions
- Talked to students about their campus involvement

There are over 100 opportunities included in the book; however, this is in no way an exhaustive list of the many ways you can grow as a leader in Lyle and at SMU. In addition, the “competency tags” associated with the opportunities do not capture all of the offerings and benefits of the courses, programs, and activities.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

The Field Guide is a resource to complement the Hart Leadership Assessment and workbook. It is a tool to help you create your personal development action plan. Think of this material as a strategic way to custom fit your overall college experience.

You will get the most benefit from the Field Guide by first taking the Hart Leadership Assessment and analyzing your results in the workbook. These tools will equip you with an awareness of your strengths and weaknesses associated with leadership. Armed with this information, you can create a personal development plan (PDP) to leverage your abilities and fortify areas needing improvement.

The Field Guide helps you scan the Lyle and SMU landscape and identify organizations, events, and activities that are both interesting and suited for your areas of leadership development.

SMU offers an array of outstanding programs and activities, of which many are highlighted in the Field Guide. We encourage you to explore these opportunities according to your interests.

1. Take the Hart Leadership Assessment
2. Analyze your results with a Hart Team Member
3. Identify Your Personal Strengths and Areas of Improvement
4. Reference the Field Guide to craft a PDP
 - Search the Index by Leadership Competency (Self-Aware, Engages Others, Champions Effective Processes, etc.)
 - Reference the programs, activities, etc.
4. Create your PDP. (Reference the Hart Leadership Development Workbook)

Alternative Breaks is a student organization offering direct service opportunities every academic break, including Fall, Winter, Spring and local day/weekend trips. Alternative Breaks takes groups of students, student leaders, and faculty/staff to communities in need across the country and world to perform life-changing service with amazing non-profit organizations. After a student has experienced a trip as a participant, he or she may apply to be a part of Alternative Breaks Leadership Team in the capacity of Executive Board member or Site Leader. Executive Board members are responsible for guiding the program forward in the terms of outreach, fundraising, recruitment, finances and more. Site Leaders have the opportunity to plan and execute a trip, from start to finish. Site Leaders communicate and coordinate with the non-profit agency, host pre-trip meetings for participants, create an itinerary, lead the group for the entirety of the trip, manage the trip budget and more.

This course is designed to educate students of all disciplines about the far-reaching societal impact of the ethical decision-making process regarding the use of technology. The influence of ethics in making choices is widespread—they affect an individual's, a business's, or even a country's security, economic strength, policies, and culture. Today's widely available technology has enabled participation in large-scale cheating and theft by ordinary citizens, including many who consider themselves as upstanding members of society. The course develops the student's ability to think critically about contemporary technological ethical issues and the impact of personal decisions living and working in a global technological society.

INFORMS student chapter is a venue for learning, a catalyst for professional advancement, and an opportunity for camaraderie. Within a chapter, student members from business, engineering, and science programs can join with faculty to organize seminars and discussion groups about new methods and applications of OR/MS. The chapter also enables students to go beyond the bounds of course work and institution as they engage in research activities that lay the groundwork for their future as OR/MS professionals. Of course, occasional social outings enjoyably round out an INFORMS student chapter's calendar.
