

Biographical Sketch
D. Stephen Long

D. Stephen Long is Cary M. Maguire University Professor of Ethics at Southern Methodist University. He previously taught at Marquette University 2007-2015, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary 1998-2007, and St. Joseph's University, Philadelphia 1995-1998. He served as director of continuing education at Duke Divinity School 1990-1995. He received a bachelor's degree from Taylor University and master's and PhD from Duke. He works in the intersection between theology and ethics and has published over fifty essays and twenty books including Divine Economy: Theology and the Market; Christian Ethics: Very Short Introduction; The Perfectly Simple Triune God; Augustinian and Ecclesial Christian Ethics; Truth-Telling in a Post-Truth World; The Art of Cycling, Living, and Dying, The Routledge Companion to Christian Ethics with Rebekah Miles, On Teaching and Learning Christian Ethics (Georgetown Univ. Press 2024) and A Theological Economy: The Legacies of Adam Smith and St. Paul (T & T Clark, forthcoming). He is ordained in the United Methodist Church and served churches in Roatan, Honduras, Apex, North Carolina, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and regularly preaches and presides at Cox Chapel, Dallas. He is married to Ricka. They have four children and four grandchildren.